ABSTRACT

This directory of organizations and agencies that survey academic libraries for statistical information on a regular basis includes 104 organizations representing state and federal agencies, college and university administrative bodies, accrediting organizations, all types of library organizations and associations, and publishers. The directory reflects the status of statistical data gathering from academic libraries in the United States and Canada during the period 1982-1984. It is the result of a project done by the Library Administration and Management Association (LAMA) Statistics for College and University Libraries Committee; the committee members participating in the project are included in the directory. The organizations or agencies are arranged alphabetically within the geographic area covered by their survey. The address and contact person, if identified, are listed for each agency. Each entry also lists the title of the survey instrument and data on its publication, coverage, frequency, currency, availability, and use of definitions. If the source of the definitions is known, it is included as well. Concluding the directory are indexes of agencies, contact persons, surveys, and publications. (MAB)

INTRODUCTION

The Directory of Agencies Collecting Statistical Data From College and University Libraries is a guide to organizations and agencies that survey academic libraries for statistical information on a regular basis. It is the first directory of this type. Included are 104 organizations representing state and federal agencies, college and university administrative bodies, accrediting organizations, all types of library organizations and associations, and publishers.

The Directory reflects the status of statistical data gathering from academic libraries in the United States and Canada during the period 1982-1984. It is the result of a project done by the Library Administration and Management Association (LAMA) Statistics for College and University Libraries Committee. Committee members participating in this project are listed on page viii.

BACKGROUND

There has been a lack of organized information on library statistics gathering. Librarians have long been aware of the many problems associated with statistical data surveys. These problems may be generalized into three areas:

1. Time, effort, and cost involved in the collection and completion of the many surveys;
2. Confusion and inaccuracies due to the lack of uniform standards, clear directions or definitions;
3. Inability to acquire accurate, comparable data when needed.

Progress toward the resolution of these problems has been made in recent years. The U.S. Department of Education's Higher Education and General Information Survey (HEGIS) has simplified data collection a great deal. As this directory shows, many libraries and agencies are adopting HEGIS definitions and using HEGIS survey questions or data to satisfy other information needs. Unfortunately, the HEGIS survey is not regular enough nor is the data available soon enough.

Use of the American National Standard For Library And Information Sciences And Related Publishing Practices - Library Statistics, better known as the ANSI Z39.7, 1983 edition, will help provide the consistency necessary for comparative data. Other committees are now developing and testing data-gathering forms based on these standards.

The ideal is one comprehensive, standardized statistical data base readily accessible on-line, on disc, in computer output microform (COM), or in print, according to the needs of users. Computer data can be easily manipulated, thereby making comparisons, projections, and tabulations easier for any agency or library.

THE PROJECT

In 1982 during the annual American Library Association Conference, the LAMA Statistics Committee identified the need to determine who was regularly collecting statistical data from college and university libraries and what types of data they were collecting. Following initial discussions and planning, geographic areas were assigned to committee members, and the project was begun.

In each geographic area all types of colleges and universities were first contacted to determine what agencies requested statistical information from them on a regular basis. These agencies were then surveyed directly to determine answers to the following questions:

1. What data elements are included in the surveys?
2. What libraries are included in these surveys?
3. How frequently are these data collected?
4. Are the data published?
5. If so, what is the title of the publication?
6. How current are the data when they are published?
7. For how many years have these data been collected?
8. For how many years are data available at this time?
9. Are these data readily available?
10. Where can one obtain these data? (exact name and address of source)
11. What standards or definitions are used in the surveys so that responses from several institutions are comparable?
12. Are copies of the questionnaires available so that we may include them in the sourcebook if we decide to do so?
13. Are there regional agencies with which you cooperate in collecting and/or publishing library statistical data? If so, what are they?

Respondents were encouraged to include a sample of the survey questionnaire used in their data gathering process. Many did. Some sent a copy of the resulting publication or report. A number only summarized the data elements or did not include that information at all. Numerous follow-up contacts by mail and telephone were made to add to or clarify the data.

The resulting information is compiled here. It reflects the status of statistical data collection from college and university libraries between mid-1982 and the end of 1984.

ARRANGEMENT

Organizations or agencies are arranged alphabetically within the geographic area covered by their survey. Listed first under North America are those agencies surveying colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada. Next are agencies conducting surveys within Canada. Three of these are nationwide surveys and one is confined to the province of Quebec. Under United States - National are listed agencies which survey academic institutions throughout the United States. Also included are those agencies that collect data from selected colleges and universities in scattered locations throughout the country. While the number of institutions surveyed may be small, they are not confined to any specific region within the United States. Agencies with regional surveys follow alphabetically by region. Most of the regions are entirely within the United States, but one Northwest group includes some Canadian provinces as well. Each state is then covered in alphabetical order.

The address and contact person, if identified, are listed for each agency. It is important to note that some may have changed since the time of the survey. This is especially true of associations with elected officers. While contacts listed may be outof-date, they remain valuable for information they may share and for referral to current officers.

In most instances the survey title listed is that of the survey instrument. Where the title was not known, the published survey title was used. Published titles are underlined. Information about the survey includes data regarding its publication, coverage, frequency, currency, availability, notes, and use of definitions. If the source of the definitions was known, it was included as well. HEGIS refers to those definitions supplied by the United State Department of Education General Information Survey; ALA refers to Library Statistics: A Handbook of Concepts Definitions and Terminology published by ALA in 1966; ANSI Z39.7 refers to American National Standard For Library And Information Sciences And Related Publishing Practices - Library Statistics, 1983.

The data collected are indicated within sixteen general categories: enrollment, staffing, income, expenditures, circulation, interlibrary loan, reference transactions, library hours, library facilities, volumes held, volumes added, titles, documents, microforms, audiovisual materials, and periodical titles. Two other categories allow for additional miscellaneous data items. The category "other collections" includes machine-readable data bases, manuscripts, maps, games and musical scores. The category of "other data" includes such things as door counts, computer searches, photocopy use, type of institution, numbers and types of degrees, financial base, analysis of data (i.e., acquisitions per student); automation activities, specialized services, networking, and personnel policies.

Indexes provide access by agency, contact person, survey and publication title.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION GENERAL INFORMATION SURVEY (HEGIS)

The Higher Education General Information Survey (HEGIS) is conducted by the United States Department of Education, National Center for Education Statistics (NCES). Details on the survey itself can be found on page 8.

The manner in which the HEGIS survey is conducted varies and can seem quite confusing. In many of the states coordination is handled through one or more state agencies. These agencies coordinate the data collection for NCES and may also make use of the data for their own purposes. This is indicated in the directory under the appropriate state agency as SURVEY HEGIS (coordinates). Many of these agencies augment the HEGIS data with a supplementary survey of their own, and most conduct their own survey during the years the HEGIS survey is not conducted. These agency surveys are also listed as an additional SURVEY entry under the appropriate agency.

In some states a state agency simply sends out and collects the HEGIS surveys for transmittal to NCES. The agency does not make use of the data. This situation is indicated under the agency's name by the entry SURVEY HEGIS (pass through only). In some states, as in Maine, Nebraska, and Rhode Island, the HEGIS survey is sent directly to the colleges and universities and is returned directly to NCES. These are not listed since they are not handled by any state agency.

There are also several organizations that use copies of the HEGIS survey for their own use. These are indicated as SURVEY HEGIS (copies of).

COMMENTS AND SUGGESTIONS

Although the Committee has attempted to make this Directory as inclusive as possible, there are bound to be omissions. Modifications, additions, or corrections as well as comments on its usefulness are welcome. They may be sent to Lynn LaBrake, Associate Director of Libraries, University of Central Florida, Orlando, Florida 32816-0666. Future editions will be planned depending upon the response to this first one.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Special thanks go to the many people who took the time and interest to respond to the surveys, letters and phone calls. Without their cooperation, this Directory would not have been possible. Their enthusiasm and encouragement is very much appreciated.

The Committee acknowledges the contributions of Mary Jo Lynch, Director of the ALA Office for Research, who met with the Committee at both the Annual Conference and Midwinter in 1983 and who shared in an exchange of information early in the editing process. The editor also acknowledges the helpful guidance given by Ann Heidbreder Eastman, Chair of the LAMA Publications Committee.

Appreciation goes to AnaMaria Turco, Sandra Williamson, and other staff of the University of Central Florida Library for their very capable clerical assistance and to the University of Central Florida for providing financial support for the editorial work.

Last, but most important, special commendation goes to the Committee members who did the leg work on this project and who supported the efforts to see it through to publication. They are:

Rodger Harris, Chair of the Committee (Davis Library, University of North Carolina), who provided the initial momentum, organization, and guidance for the project and who surveyed Arkansas, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, ARL, LIBGIS/HEGIS

Raymond Carpenter (University of North Carolina), who surveyed Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont

Maureen Harris (Clemson University Library), who surveyed Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina
